

Q In current global politics, the concept of multilateralism need to be re-defined. Comment in context of public health & expected financial crisis.

Multilateralism is when at least three governments participate in a particular issue or to try to solve a problem

The onset of Covid crisis has pressed the current global politics to strike a fine balance between "Co-operation" and "competition". To achieve this equilibrium, multilateralism is a key component. In this globalised world, nations are interdependent and therefore can not tackle crisis related to public health and economy solely on their own.

Multilateralism is an institutional form which co-ordinate relation among multiple nations on basis of generalised principle of conduct without regard to particular party interest. WHO, WTO are multilateral platforms. The features of multilateral global order are:-

i) Facilitating co-operation

e.g in issues of climate change, public health (Swine flu, Ebola) etc.

ii) Conflict prevention

iii) Achievement of common goals

However, the current format of multilateralism face certain challenges :-

Introduction looks too long. Write precisely to show the examiner that you understand the context of question

a) Influence of Money Power:

Influential nations impact functioning of global bodies to align to their own interest. They do so by threatening them ~~to~~ reducing their monetary contribution. e.g. weakening of WTO appellate body & WTO as a whole is example to it.

The current issue:

1. Domination of developed nations in the decision making.

Eg: In WTO

2. Uneven power distribution among the countries

Eg: veto power to the permanent members of UNSC

3. Impact of bilateral issues in multilateral decisions.

Eg: US- China rivalry, US- Russia issue

b) Disrespect of general principle formed by global bodies e.g. U.S exit of Paris agreement, China sidelining ICJ judgement on South China sea.

c) Exclusive role of bigger nations and sidelining middle & lower powers e.g. veto power of 'PS' Nations in UNSC.

These challenges make multilateralism unsustainable & questionable as can be seen in current content with example of WHO. Doubts and questions are being raised on WHO's favouritism towards China and slow response towards the emergency. Therefore multilateralism needs to be redefined with elimination of above challenges.

Too long explanation, directly discuss how to redefine multilateralism in order to tackle ongoing public health crisis and upcoming financial crisis.

Financial fragilities unaddressed since 2008 crisis stored up serious problem for global economy. Weak multilateralism lead to unilateralism, trade war, protectionism, poor early warning system for infectious diseases. An enhanced multilateralism can assist faster development and distribution of vaccine along with rapid jump from upcoming recession following the 'V' graph of economy. Transfer of technology, research, and overall enhanced globalisation is the way out of crisis.

The minsky moment (sudden big collapse of asset value) has arrived worldwide exaggerated by ongoing covid crisis. But as Churchill said, "Why waste a crisis?", It's time to rewrite rules of global economy and frame rules for global health concern. The resolution in WHO for Impartial Independent and Comprehensive investigation of covid is a good start. The world order needs to be inclusive, sustainable working on principle of healthy competition and healthier co-operation.

Still the challenges in present multilateralism is being discussed instead how to enhance it

The arguments should be discussed elaborately.
